URING the months of July and August, 1916, Augustana College carried on within its halls a special term of Summer School for teachers. The results with respect to attendance, quality of work done, and practical benefit derived were so gratifying that the institution feels encouraged to continue this work during the summer of 1917. Accordingly we wish to announce that courses in Psychology, English Literature, and the Principles of Teaching will be offered during the coming summer. The term will begin on Monday, June 25th, to continue six weeks, ending on Friday, August 3rd. By giving the several subjects in double periods of an hour and a half each the work done will be equivalent to that of twelve weeks with periods of forty-five minutes. By this arrangement which has proved entirely satisfactory in the past, the students will be able to earn three full semester hours in the subjects above named. By special agreement the credits earned in this way will be recognized by the local school authorities and also by the State Examining Board at Springfield. This work will be of strictly college grade, and will count not only for State certificate but also for graduation at our institution.

In addition to this, it has been thought advisable to offer courses in such subjects as English grammar, U. S. history,

Civics, and Arithmetic for the benefit of those who may wish to review or make up in these branches preparatory to examination for second grade certificate or for entrance to college. If a sufficient number of students will signify by letter or phone their intention to enroll for these courses before the beginning of the term, arrangements will be made for giving the courses. This work will be of Academy or high school grade, and will be given in single hour periods.

The work, both of College grade and Academy grade, will be in charge of our regular College professors, and not in the hands of tutors. Students attending this summer term will be allowed the privilege of using our fine reading room and the books in Denkmann Memorial Library. The facilities offered will be first class in all respects. Those who attended this school last summer are enthusiastic in its praise. The prospects for a good attendance are very encouraging. We feel sure that no one enrolling with us for the coming term will be disappointed. Try Augustana first, and you will be more than satisfied.
